

Invites your interest in the position of Deputy Police Chief

The City of Goldsboro, located in Wayne County, North Carolina, is seeking a Deputy Police Chief who exemplifies the values of integrity, service, and accountability to work in this CALEA accredited department.

The newly established position of Deputy Police Chief will serve as the second-in-command of the Goldsboro Police Department, providing executive-level leadership and strategic oversight of department operations. The Deputy Chief will work closely with the Chief of Police to establish and implement department policies, ensure compliance, and manage priority public safety initiatives.

The Deputy Chief will be responsible for supervising division Majors, overseeing day-to-day department functions, and leading specialized policing efforts to enhance public safety. This position plays a key role in personnel management, budgeting, crime prevention strategies, and community engagement. The Deputy Chief will assume full command of the department in the Chief's absence and represent the department in high-level discussions with city leadership, community stakeholders, and law enforcement agencies.

The Community:

Goldsboro (population 33,804) is a steeped in history and characterized by its diverse populace and vibrant community. When Wayne County was formed in 1789, the town of Waynesborough developed along the banks of the Neuse River around the county courthouse that was built there. In the late 1830s, the Wilmington and Raleigh (Weldon) Railroad line was built to the east of Waynesborough. At the intersection of the railroad and the New Bern Road, a hotel was built, and a community began to establish itself. This community became known as Goldsborough's Junction after Major Matthew T. Goldsborough, an Assistant Chief Engineer with the railroad line. The town of Goldsborough was incorporated in 1847, and the name officially changed to Goldsboro in 1869.

The City of Goldsboro became the county seat for Wayne County in 1847 and has expanded to an area encompassing over twenty-five miles, with a transportation center for the area's agriculture industry. The modern population represents a variety of racial and ethnic backgrounds*: Black or African American: 53.3%, White: 36.2%, Hispanic or Latino: 5.5%, Asian: 1.8%, Native American: 0.2%, Two or more races: 7.1%. This diversity is not just statistical; it's woven into the fabric of everyday life, influencing the City's culture, cuisine, and community interactions. The median age of 36.7 years signifies a relatively young and dynamic population, brimming with energy and potential. However, the economic landscape is varied. While the median household income is $47,005, the poverty rate of 20.8% and designation as a Tier 1 community underscore the economic disparities that a significant portion of the population faces. *Source: Census.gov.

Goldsboro's cultural scene is a vibrant mosaic, shaped by the diverse influences of its residents. Festivals, art exhibitions, and musical performances celebrate this diversity and foster a sense of shared identity. Goldsboro is more than just a collection of buildings and streets; it's a community where people live, work, and play. Residents take pride in their city and actively participate in community events and initiatives. The City offers a variety of recreational opportunities, from parks and trails to sports facilities and cultural centers. The nearby Cliffs of the Neuse State Park provides a serene escape for outdoor enthusiasts, while the City's numerous festivals and events bring people together for celebration and shared experiences.

The City of Goldsboro is the proud home of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, home of the 4th Fighter Wing and 916th Air Refueling Wing. Seymour Johnson received the Commander in Chief's Installation Excellence Award from the Air Force for 2001, the highest award given to a military base. Spanning more than five decades and five wars, Seymour Johnson AFB's 4th Fighter Wing is one of the most distinguished fighter units in the world. The 4th Fighter Wing of Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C., puts airpower on target, on time for America. The wing is home to the multi-role, all-weather F-15E Strike Eagle and provides worldwide deployable aircraft and personnel capable of executing combat missions supporting the Aerospace Expeditionary Force.

The City's economic roots were deeply embedded in agriculture and manufacturing. While these sectors continue contributing, the City's economy has diversified in recent years. In addition to an engaged partnership with the Air Force Base, Healthcare, with institutions like Wayne UNC Health Care, and education with Wayne Community College, government services are now major employers. Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, located just outside Goldsboro, is a cornerstone of the local economy, providing jobs and stimulating businesses. The City is also making strides in attracting new industries and promoting entrepreneurship.

Goldsboro values education as a catalyst for personal and community growth. Wayne Community College offers a range of academic and vocational programs, while the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's Highway Safety Research Center contributes to research and innovation. The City's public school system strives to provide quality education to all students, preparing them for future success.

Like any city, Goldsboro faces its share of challenges. Poverty, crime, and infrastructure needs require ongoing attention and collaborative solutions. However, the City's potential for growth and development is immense. Its diverse population, rich history, and strong sense of community are valuable assets. Goldsboro is charting a course toward a brighter future by leveraging these strengths and addressing its challenges head-on.

Goldsboro, North Carolina, is more than just a dot on the map; it has a unique identity, a rich tapestry of stories, and a promising future. It's a place where history whispers, diversity thrives, and community spirit shines. As Goldsboro continues to evolve, it remains committed to preserving its heritage, embracing its diversity, and creating a better quality of life for all its residents.
